

One Story of Entrepreneurship in Africa: Challenges and Opportunities of Doing Business in Developing Countries

This book describes the challenges that one entrepreneur faced when producing and exporting value-added products out of Mali, West Africa. This personal account is meant to explain the on-the-ground realities that currently exist, and to start a discussion about how to overcome the many challenges. It is essential reading for investors, social entrepreneurs, Western and African entrepreneurs, and anybody generally interested in African economic development. Ashley Heacock gives a clear and concise depiction of the challenges businesses in Africa face that goes beyond theory and hypothesis to real, on-the-ground actions and experiences. - Colin Coleman, Head of Investment Banking for Sub-Saharan Africa, Goldman Sachs International Bonus Materials from the Author: Your How-to Guide on Starting a Business in Africa, A Philosophy on Development: Redefining Poverty, and The Impact of Mining on a West African Community.
